Verizon Gives Discounts to Loyal Customers, Many Caveats to Qualify

Andrew Berg

Verizon is offering some of its customers a break on their wireless bills, according to a report [1] from Fierce Wireless.

Verizon spokeswoman Debi Lewis confirmed for Wireless Week that the carrier has long offered reduced rates for long-standing customers. She said there are a lot of caveats to qualify for the reduced rates and as such the plans are not advertised.

"There's really not a lot of news here," Lewis said, noting the plans are just another tool that Verizon's customer care representatives can use to retain long-time loyal customers.

Lewis said the plans are not a direct response to competitive pressure from other players in the market. Fierce Wireless reported catching wind of the price breaks via Verizon online customer forums.

While T-Mobile's Un-Carrier initiatives have rocked the boat for AT&T and Sprint recently, Verizon has managed to stay above the fray [2]. AT&T meanwhile recently launched [3] Mobile Share Value plans, which start at $130 for two lines, 10GB of data and unlimited talk and text, a big reduction from the company's previous rates.

Not to be left out of the game, Sprint recently unveiled "Framily" plans, which start at $55 for unlimited talk, text and 1GB of data. From there, the plans decrease in price as more individuals are added to the plan, eventually dropping to $25 per month when a single plan hits 7 devices. Because each account can be billed separately, customers can choose who is in their group. For $20 per month, per line, Framily members can buy up to unlimited data plus get a new phone every year.

As of now, Verizon charges customers $180 per month for a plan similar to what AT&T is now offering with 10 GB of data and two lines.

Source URL (retrieved on 04/24/2014 - 2:23am):
http://www.wirelessweek.com/news/2014/02/verizon-gives-discounts-loyal-customers-many-caveats-qualify

Links:
[1] http://www.fiercewireless.com/story/verizon-offering-loyalty-plans-retain-customers-around-60month-talk-text-an/2014-02-07
[2] http://www.wirelessweek.com/blogs/2014/02/un-carrier-effect-t-wide-awake-

verizon
[3] http://www.wirelessweek.com/news/2014/02/new-t-mobile-share-plans-two-lines-10gb-data-130