

SmartWatch, Episode 4: T-Mo's Legere Opines on Everything from AWS to a New iPhone

In this edition of SmartWatch, sponsored by SanDisk [1], we get special insights from outspoken T-Mobile CEO John Legere on a number of recent happenings. From Softbank CEO Masayoshi Son's recent trip to CCA in San Antonio to rumors of a new iPhone, John Legere has something to say about all of it.

In this episode, we take a look at reactions to new rules set forth by the FCC for the upcoming AWS-3 auction. We also cover Masayoshi Son's pledge to put SoftBank's and Sprint's scale and assets, including access to Sprint's Spark 2.5 GHz network, behind rural carriers.

[Read: Sprint's Son Talks "Real Competition" \[2\]](#)

[Read: Sprint Promises Support for Smaller Carriers \[3\]](#)

And if that's not enough, how about a new iPhone? Yep, reports surfaced this week that Apple has begun production of screens for a new 4.7-inch iPhone, with production for a larger phablet device to begin later this Summer.

All this and more in this week's episode of SmartWatch!

Source URL (retrieved on 03/05/2015 - 5:27am):

<http://www.wirelessweek.com/videos/2014/04/smartwatch-episode-4-t-mos-legere-opines-everything-aws-new-iphone>

Links:

[1] <http://www.sandisk.com/goto/storage/>

[2] <http://www.wirelessweek.com/news/2014/03/sprint%E2%80%99s-son-%E2%80%9Cwe-need-real-competition-not-pseudo-competition%E2%80%9D>

[3] <http://www.wirelessweek.com/news/2014/03/sprint-bringing-lte-smaller-carriers-and-vice-versa>